It always makes my day to hand a child their Reach Out & Read book. It is both informative and fun to see a toddler handle their new book and explore the pages. For kids who are a little older, it is immensely gratifying to see their looks of excitement at getting a new book. I am always happy when I have to switch out the book I give them because they have a copy, which means they are already reading at home!

As a doctor, it's rewarding to see a child's excitement when receiving a book during a well visit. It's also enjoyable to talk with the child and the parents about the book they are receiving and the importance of reading. And, as a parent, it's super cool to see my own kids' excitement when they receive a new book at their well visits. It's really an amazing program!

The Reach Out & Read program is an amazing part of my patients' well-child visits. I love seeing their excitement as they receive and interact with their very own book for the first time. Our decision to make all books bilingual in English-Spanish enriches and acknowledges our community's diversity while celebrating reading for everyone!
